The Leora Story

We were founded in 2008 as Afea Care Services by our Founder and Co-CEO Esha Oberoi.

As she scaled Afea as a disability and aged care service, she saw the challenges her staff and clients faced in accessing timely mental health support. To address this urgent need, she founded and launched Leora AI, an AI-driven platform and mental health service.

In 2024, Afea Care Services and Leora AI united under one iconic brand, Leora Healthcare, aligning with our long-term vision to provide innovative and holistic healthcare services.

Leora means light and is a symbol of illumination, clarity and enlightenment. As Leora Healthcare, we continue the important work of providing life-changing care and support.

Empowering Support Designed Just For You

Our home and community care services are delivered by a dedicated and diverse team of care professionals. We collaborate with you to ensure you're paired with the support that best fits your specific needs and preferences.

What is NDIS

The NDIS (National Disability Insurance Scheme) is an Australian Government initiative designed to support people with permanent and significant disabilities. It empowers participants by providing funding for necessary supports and services to help them achieve their goals in areas such as independence, employment, community involvement, education, and health. The NDIS is built on principles of choice and control, aiming to enhance the quality of life and enable individuals to participate fully in society with dignity and respect.

For Those Just Starting Their NDIS Journey

A. Understanding Your Eligibility for the NDIS

The first step is determining whether you meet the NDIS access criteria. Eligibility is based on several key factors: you must be under 65 years old at the time of application, live in Australia as a citizen, permanent resident, or hold a Protected Special Category Visa, and have a permanent and significant disability that impacts your ability to take part in everyday activities. Early intervention supports are available for young children to help reduce the future impact of disability.

B. Creating Your Individualised NDIS Plan

Once your access request is approved, you will participate in a planning conversation with a Local Area Coordinator (LAC), Early Childhood Partner, or NDIS Planner. In this conversation, you'll discuss your current supports, living situation, goals, and what you need to pursue greater independence and participation in community life. This results in a tailored plan, outlining the types of supports funded by the NDIS and the goals you aim to achieve over time.

C. Accessing and Choosing Service Providers

After your NDIS plan is approved, you are empowered to select the service providers that best suit your needs and preferences. These providers deliver the necessary supports, which may include allied health therapies, personal care, community access, supported employment, assistive technology, and daily living skills programs. You have the flexibility to change providers if your circumstances or needs evolve, ensuring you always receive the most appropriate support.

D. Implementing Your Plan and Reviewing Your Progress

The next step is to put your plan into action. You might manage your own supports, or engage a plan manager or support coordinator to assist you. Regular plan reviews — typically every 12 months — allow you to track your progress, address any changes in your circumstances, and adjust your funding and goals as needed. A plan review is a collaborative process, focusing on celebrating achievements, identifying new challenges, and ensuring your plan continues to reflect your aspirations.

E. Building Your Capacity, Skills, and Independence

One of the key aims of the NDIS is to not only provide necessary supports but also to empower participants to build skills that enable greater independence, community participation, and economic contribution. Capacity-building supports focus on areas like daily living skills, communication, social participation, education, employment, and improved relationships. Over time, these supports are designed to reduce reliance on funded supports and enhance self-management, resilience, and long-term wellbeing.

When preparing to apply, it's important to think about what you hope to achieve with your funding. Setting meaningful goals can shape your plan in a way that truly supports your needs. You might want to reflect on questions like:

- What are the things that truly matter to me?
- What activities bring me joy?
- What supports would help me live more independently and happily?
- In what ways could my health and wellbeing be improved?
- Which networks or groups could I connect with for support?
- How can I become more active and involved in my community?
- What steps could help me build more confidence in different areas of my life?
